

HOW & WHY ANIMALS HIDE

How & Why Animals Hide

The star-nosed mole hides underground. It digs a burrow with its strong claws and uses its strange, fleshy nose to feel its way around.

A flying squirrel hides in a hole in a tree. It spends the day there and comes out at night to look for food.

The world can be a dangerous place for little animals such as the squirrel and mole. Bigger animals might want to eat them. Their hiding places keep them safe.

