

HOW & WHY PLANTS EAT INSECTS

How & Why Plants Eat Insects

Pitcher plants poke up from the damp ground. You can see how they got their name: Each plant has a little pitcher that holds water. Pitcher plants are even stranger than they seem. These plants eat insects!

A frog visits the pitcher plants. The frog and the plants are waiting for the same thing—a tasty insect meal.

