Animal Senses and Defenses

by Susan Ring

What do animals see?
What do animals hear?

What do animals smell?

What do animals feel?

Animals use their senses to stay safe.

Birds can see very well.
They fly away when they see danger.
