

A close-up photograph of a herd of zebras gathered around a water source, likely a watering hole. The zebras are shown from the chest up, with their heads lowered to drink. Their black and white stripes are very prominent and create a strong visual pattern across the entire image. The water in the foreground is dark and reflects the light. The title text is overlaid on the upper portion of the image.

What Comes in Groups?

by Lisa Trumbauer

Here is one kitten.

A group of kittens is a litter.
Count the kittens in this litter.

Here is one sheep.

