

A close-up photograph of numerous ladybugs, likely the common seven-spotted ladybug, clustered together on a vibrant green leaf. The ladybugs are shown from various angles, some facing the viewer and others in profile. Their bright red elytra are marked with distinct black spots. The background is a soft-focus green, emphasizing the texture and color of the insects and the leaf.

Take a Guess

by Joanne Randolph

Sometimes you don't need exact information.
Guessing in math is called estimation!

Do you think there are ten horses here or less?
Instead of counting, just take a guess.

About how many ducklings do you see?
Instead of counting, just take a guess.