

Whatever the Weather

KAREN WALLACE

William watches from the window.
It's cold outside.
Snow is falling.
Each tiny snowflake
is made of ice.

snowflake

William watches from the window.
Icicles shine in the trees.
Icicles form when drops of water drip,
then freeze
and stick together.

William watches from the window.
He watches storm clouds
fill the sky.

ZAp!

He sees a flash of lightning.

BOOM!

He hears the thunder rumble.

William holds his teddy near him.

One day it snows,
the next it hails, and then the sun shines. But why does William wish for rain?
